Highlights

- Observed concealment does not uniquely identify its generating process.
- Early adverse feedback reduced later sampling, not final masking.
- Action and context representation changed what learners discovered.
- Learned masking shifted before the environmental cost crossover.